

Queensland Critical Minerals ESG Capability Survey FAQs

→ 1. Why was the survey developed?

The Queensland Critical Minerals Industry (QCMI) ESG Capability Survey has been developed under the AusIMM and Queensland Government ESG Partnership. It is designed to capture perceptions on Environmental Social and Governance (ESG) capability and awareness, along with identifying needs and initiatives to support capability uplift.

→ 2. Who is the survey for?

All QCMI stakeholders are invited to have their say, including ESG professionals, companies, value chain members, as well as other interested or affected parties including community members.

→ 3. What if I don't have a lot of knowledge of QCMI or ESG?

Your perspectives are still important as they will inform what is needed to support capability. Further, the results will provide a baseline for the survey to be replicated in the future to understand progress.

→ 4. When will the survey be open?

The survey is open from 17 March – 17 April 2025.

→ 5. How can the survey be completed?

The survey can be completed on desktop or laptop computers, tablets or mobile devices. However, for best functionality, we suggest completing it on a desktop or laptop.

It can be accessed here: <https://survey.alchemer.eu/s3/90807438/QCMI-ESG-Baseline-Survey>

→ 6. What will the results be used for?

The results will be utilised by the AusIMM and Queensland Government ESG Partnership to understand current and desired ESG capability levels and shape the development of ESG capability uplift initiatives.

Please note that any initiatives developed as a result of the survey will not duplicate existing ESG capability uplift resources already available to the industry.

→ 7. Where will I be able to find the survey results?

A summary of the results will be published on the AusIMM website later in the year.
